

LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR ONLINE GAMBLING AND BETTING

Decree-Law No. 66/2015
of 29 April

The publication of Decree No. 14.463, of 3 December 1927, brought a century-old tradition of gambling prohibitions to an end. Indeed, the 1867 Civil Code provided that “the gambling contract as a means of earning is not permitted”, while the 1886 Criminal Code also outlawed the activity of gambling operations, the profession of gambler, and occasional gambling.

Nevertheless, the desire to gamble was an insurmountable reality and, as a result, the preamble to Decree No. 14.463, of 3 December 1927, stated that “gambling was a fact against which no proscriptive provisions could stand”.

Thus, after weighing up and balancing all the values at stake – banning an activity that could potentially cause damage to individuals, families and society or, conversely, recognising that, despite the ban, it continued to exist –, it was deemed preferable to establish the terms and conditions on which the activity could be undertaken, regulating it and thereby protecting those involved, avoiding lawless behaviour and establishing limits for operating and engaging in this activity.

Once the ineffectiveness of the ban had been recognised, the regulation aimed at setting rules and establishes the conditions on which gambling could be carried on and who could engage in it. Gambling areas were set up with the aim of affording the conditions necessary for gambling to be carried on in a controlled environment, with guarantees of good standing, and reducing or eliminating the interest in illegal underground gambling. The paradigm shift which steered the actions of the State was also evident, discarding the criminal ban and seeking to modulate behaviour by way of taxation. Historically, therefore, the taxation of gambling became an effective regulatory component.

In 1989, the publication of Decree-Law No. 422/89, of 2 December, systematised the regulatory provisions governing the matter, envisaging all the types and forms of operating games of chance existing at the time. However, this decree-law maintained the regulatory line that had been followed since Decree No. 14.463, of 3 December 1927. Accordingly, through the special gambling tax (IEJ), a dedicated tax system was set up, with an assumed corrective purpose and with the specificities appropriate to the nature of the activity to be taxed. Moreover, the IEJ, by compressing the actual profit method to calculate tax payable, in its purest form, brought about the necessary distancing of the State from a direct interest in gambling.

Gambling in Portugal therefore went from being a prohibited and unregulated activity to a system of regulation which recognised that the right to operate games of chance is reserved to the State, while establishing the possibility of gambling operations being conducted under concession contracts.

Although several amendments were made to Decree-Law No. 422/89, of 2 December, its fundamental principles and form remained unchanged, and it was clear from its normative framework that the regulation of gambling does not seek to satisfy a need to intervene in a public interest activity, – as gambling is not a general interest activity which is required to be pursued –, but rather to control the spread of and unregulated engagement in gambling and regulate the way in which this control should be carried out.

However, since the approval of the above-mentioned Decree-Law No. 422/89, of 2 December, the operating of and engagement in this activity underwent major changes and the normative framework by which it is currently governed did not keep pace with these developments. Apart from the technological development of gambling systems and equipment, a new situation emerged which was not covered by the existing legislation and which, in recent years, has taken on a growing and undeniable significance – online gambling.

The current normative framework governing games of chance is unable to provide a response to the current dimension of this activity and it is necessary to regulate new operating forms which allow for a response to the developments seen in the market.

The operating model for games of chance in Portugal therefore needs to be reconsidered and, as it is an activity reserved to the State, such an exercise must primarily involve a change in the current normative framework that governs it, so as to enable it to keep pace with the developments and evolution seen over the last twenty-five years. This change is a determining factor, on the one hand, as a means of combating illegal gambling and, on the other, to assure balanced and transparent gambling operations.

Accordingly, a pressing need has arisen to create a new model for operating and engaging in online gambling, considered in the light of this reality and the existing legal vacuum.

It is in this context that the regulation of online gambling in Portugal takes on particular significance, requiring that its normative framework be set down in a dedicated instrument, in order to bring under the umbrella of the law the operators and players who currently gamble on the illegal market without any protection, while at the same time assuring the healthy functioning of the market. It is intended, in this way, to foster citizenship and responsible gambling and buttress the fight against the parallel economy.

The situation facing us today with regard to online gambling is comparable therefore to the one that existed in Portugal in 1927, before operating and engaging in games of chance became subject to regulation.

Today, online gambling is widespread all over the world and is a reality which the Portuguese State cannot ignore. Moreover, the last decade has witnessed a generalised trend towards online gambling legislation in Europe, which underscores the need to regulate this matter, in like manner, in Portugal.

Accordingly, the government has resolved to regulate online gambling by way of this decree-law, considering and reflecting herein the recommendations of the European Commission and the best practices being adopted in other countries.

From the outset, the legal remedies and principles laid down in the Legal Framework for Online Gambling and Betting (RJO) are appropriate and proportionate to the pursuit of the envisaged public interest objectives, in order to guarantee the protection of minors and the most vulnerable, to avoid fraud and money laundering, to prevent online gambling-related criminal behaviour and to safeguard the integrity of sport, preventing and combating the fixing of bets and results. Similarly, the RJO, by delineating and framing the supply and demand for gambling, and by controlling the operating of gambling, guarantees public safety and order, preventing excessive and unregulated gambling and addictive behaviours and practices

The RJO covers a broad spectrum of games, with the objective of affording competitiveness to the Portuguese market, as it is understood that only in this way will it be possible to reduce illegal online gambling by operators that make gambling available in Portugal and the players who access it.

Similarly to the situation in most European countries, the RJO provides that the operating of online gambling and betting must not be exclusive for some entities, even if these are already qualified to conduct gambling and betting operations in Portugal. Gambling operations must be awarded, by means of a licence, to all the entities which, in addition to these, satisfy stringent requirements regarding good standing and economic, financial and technical capacity.

As to the taxation model adopted, the RJO maintains its coherence with the regulatory logic which also guides it in respect of land-based games of chance, given the specific characteristics of the activities subject to taxation, as well as European best practices.

Finally, and with a view to assuring the effective application of the normative framework for online gambling in Portugal, the RJO confers, along with monitoring and inspection powers, true regulatory powers on the gambling supervisory body, affording it the powers and resources which will enable it to act effectively against the challenges posed by this new market. In this regard and once again in line with best practices and with the recommendations and principles embraced by the European Commission, this decree-law broadens the scope of regulation of the operating of and engagement in online gambling and betting, making provision in the RJO for the duties to monitor, inspect and regulate such activities, which are entrusted to Instituto do Turismo de Portugal, I.P., through its gambling commission and its Serviço de Regulação e Inspeção de Jogos, extending its scope of action to new types of gambling and betting and enhancing its powers and competences in these matters.

This decree-law was notified to the European Commission in compliance with Article 4 of Decree-Law No. 58/2000, of 18 April, which transposed into Portuguese law Directive 98/34/EC, of the European Parliament and of the Council, of 22 June 1998, as amended by Directive 98/48/EC, of the European Parliament and of the Council, of 20 July 1998, laying down a procedure for the provision of information in the field of technical standards and regulations and of rules on information society services.

Consultations were held with the governing bodies of the Autonomous Regions, the National Association of Portuguese Municipalities, the National Data Protection Commission, the Bank of Portugal, the Santa Casa da Misericórdia de Lisboa, the Portuguese Tourism Confederation, the Portuguese Casino Association and APRITEL - Electronic Communications Operators Association.

A hearing was held with the National Consumer Council.

Thus:

In the use of the legislative authority granted by Law No. 73/2014, of 2 September, as amended by Law No. 82-B/2014, of 31 December, and pursuant to indents a) and b) of Article 198(1) of the Constitution, the government decrees the following:

2 - The reprimand shall be made in writing and the fact which gave rise to it may not be raised again as an administrative offence.

Article 67

Additional penalties

Article 72

2 - The additional evidentiary measures requested by the offender may be denied by the monitoring, inspection and regulatory body in a reasoned decision if it considers such measures are blatantly irrelevant or are merely a delaying tactic.

3 - Without prejudice to the preceding clause, the monitoring, inspection and regulatory body may conduct additional evidentiary measures, even after the offender gives his views, and shall in this case serve notice of the further probative evidence on the latter in order to give his views thereon, within a period of not less than 10 days, should he so wish.

2 - The preventive suspension of the activity referred to in the preceding clause shall remain in effect until such time as the sentencing decision is considered res judicata, unless it is revoked by the monitoring, inspection and regulatory body owing to the fact which gave rise to its being ordered having ceased.

Article 76

Limitation period

1 - The administrative offence proceeding shall be time-barred once eight years have elapsed since the administrative offence was committed.
